Air Force surgeon general to visit new hospital

As part of Air Force Week, which runs Aug. 9-17, the Bellevue Medical Center will be welcoming the service's top physician. Lt. Gen. James G. Roudebush, surgeon general of the Air Force, will tour the new facility and speak with doctors, administrators and residents on the present and future of medicine and the military.

After visiting the BMC, Roudebush will head to Bellevue University at 9:30 a.m. to deliver the opening remarks of a presentation on the hospital's partnership with Offutt Air Force Base.
